

Eleven years after 852 people , mostly Swedes , perished when the ferry Estonia sank on a stormy Baltic night , an exhibition in the National Maritime Museum in Stockholm brings back the pain and controversy which have haunted Sweden since the disaster