

The Antarctic ozone 'hole' is defined as a thinning of the ozone layer, over the continent, to levels significantly below pre - 1979 levels.